Biographical Note

Charles H. Black was born at Hagerstown, Indiana on October 5, 1852. His parents moved to Indianapolis shortly thereafter and he grew up and continued living in Indianapolis. He married Mary Z. in 1880 and they had one child, Viola Ann. He began working with wagons, buggies and carriages after he finished high school. By the early 1890s the C. H. Black Manufacturing Company was the city's foremost carriage maker. He perfected a gasoline car in 1891. He died on August 19, 1918. As of 1939, the automobile which he drove around Indianapolis and other cities, was donated by his daughter and housed at the Indianapolis Children's Museum.
